Library Automation

Automation in the SD College Library has a long history. The formal beginning of the automation started with the dawn of 21st century when locally developed library automation software was implemented to create a database of its books. Later on the LMS was upgraded and replaced with standardized library automation software named LSEase developed by Libsys - a very popular and established brand in the field of library automation in India.

In the year 2017 again the library automation reached to a new height with the implementation of web enabled, open source LMS i.e. KOHA. With the implementation of KOHA the facility of Web-OPAC extended to the users. Initially this facility was available on the college intranet within the campus. Now, as the server of the LMS has been uploaded on the cloud hence the Web-OPAC is accessible from anywhere 24x7. The whole collection of books bears the library barcodes that helps in automated circulation and stock verification.
